Reflections on Sociology of Sport

Ten Questions, Ten Scholars, Ten Perspectives
Research in the Sociology of Sport

Kevin Young

About the Book

In this tenth and celebratory volume in the Research in the Sociology of Sport series, ten recognized and influential sport scholars from around the world reflect on their respective academic journeys. They each address ten salient questions summarizing their career and their view of the current and future status of the sociology of sport. Each chapter addresses four main themes:

- About the author: who are your mentors and influential figures? What is your research trajectory?
- About sport: why does sport matter? How should sport be studied? Is sport a panacea for social problems?
- About practising sociology of sport: is teaching sociology of sport easy? Do sociologists like sport? Is the sociologist of sport a ‘public intellectual’?
- About sociology of sport in the academy: does sociology of sport face institutional or industry barriers? What is the future of the sociology of sport?

While the ten questions are salient for everyone in the academy irrespective of field of study, they seem particularly trenchant for sociologists of sport as the subfield reaches a chronological milestone and continues to undergo its own ‘growing pains’ and maturation. Following quickly on the heels of, and conceptually tied to, Volume 9 (Sociology of Sport: A Global Subdiscipline in Review), Volume 10 now completes the ‘double celebration’ of this book series as the sociology of sport subfield turns 50.
